GOOD®
DADS

SIX SECTOR MODEL

Why Do Nonprofits Need Varying Perspectives?

Communities need buy-in from a variety of leaders who all have a vested interest in supporting engaged fatherhood.

Each Good Dads chapter aims to have two individuals from each sector represented on their Advisory Board. Each sector brings something unique to their father-focused initiative and guarantees success long-term.

The great thing about this model is that people from across disciplines work together because they all have something in common: They know responsible fatherhood matters.

Let's take a closer look at each sector!

Education

Includes:

School district, administrative personnel, etc.

What they bring to the table:

Support for programs serving fathers and students.

2

Business & Manufacturing

Includes:

Chamber of commerce, business owners, etc.

What they bring to the table:

HR Supplies, support dollars and funding classes for at-risk dads

Faith Community

Includes:

Representation from at two distinct denominations

What they bring to the table:

Volunteers, facilitators and classroom space.

City & County Government

Includes:

Mayor, city manager, county commissioners, etc.

What they bring to the table:

Public support and access to policy leaders.

Justice

Includes:

Probation & Parole, Sheriff's office, police chief, judges, assistant prosecuting attorney, etc.

What they bring to the table:

Program referrals and public support.

Social Services

Includes:

Recovery communities, prevention specialists, family-focused nonprofits, etc.

What they bring to the table:

Program referrals, facilitators and classroom space.

GRAB A SLICE!

We believe the people who actually live, work and play in a community are the same ones who invest in its success.

A community's leaders—its business owners, teachers, attorneys and mayors—are keyed into what their residents need most, and what is likely to work best for them.

When leaders across sectors can use their wisdom and connections in service of the same goal, amazing things can happen. In this way, our nearly 20 chapters have thrived.

GOOD®
DADS

Discover what it means to be a Good Dads Community chapter at our website, gooddads.com